ژ ra, the fifteenth letter of the Hindūstānī alphabet. Its sound differs from that of rr by being uttered with the tip of the tongue turned up towards the roof of the mouth. It differs very little in sound from the letter da, with which it is often interchanged, and in the Devanāgarī alphabet the same character represents both. In reckoning by abjad it counts to 200, the same as re. It is very rarely used as the first letter of a word, there being, so far as we have been able to discover, only one solitary vocable under this class, viz :

In Persian poetry it is used with the vowel i for az, zi baski for az baski, inasmuch as this letter does not occur in the Sanskrit alphabet; hence, in Indian dialects of Sanskrit origin, such as the Hindi and Bengali, it is generally changed into j, as roj for roz, a day. jin for zin, a saddle. a. p. h.

زمیندار zamin-dār, a landlord, a landholder (in reality a revenue farmer, or what, in Ireland, is called a middleman). As the term zamin-dār differs widely in its signification from our ideas of a landlord, it may be proper to add, on the authority of Gladwin, that under the Mughal government the term was applied to a person who held a tract of land immediately of government, on condition of paying the rent of it. He was first in rank among the landholders. If a zamin-dār was unable to pay up the amount of his engagements with government at the end of the year, such a part of his zamin-dārī was sold as would discharge the balance. If he was disposed of the management of his zamin-dārī, he was nevertheless exclusively responsible for all debts incurred by him during his possession, unless a mortgage was given on the zamin-dārī, or the money borrowed applied to the payment of the revenue. Zamin-dārs, by the nature of their tenures, had no longer a right to their lands than whilst they paid their revenues; and in case of failure, the sale of their land was a more just and useful recompense to government than subjecting them to corporal punishment. Should they, however, at any time have been prevented fulfilling their engagements by unavoidable accidents rather than by their own mismanagement, equity would point out what indulgence they might be entitled to on that account. p.

ص

ص called sād i muhmala or sādi ghair muhmala, the fourteenth letter of the Arabic alphabet, the seventeenth Persian, and the twentieth Hindustani. Strictly speaking, this letter is purely Arabian or Semitic, but in a few Persian words it has, in modern times, been substituted for the original sīn, to distinguish such words from others of a different signification, as sād originally sād, one hundred, and shast originally shast, sixty (to prevent their being confounded with sād, a wall, and shast, an arm); it has no corresponding letter in the Sanskrit alphabet, and in Persia and India its pronunciation is hardly distinguishable from that of sīn; but among the Arabs its sound is stronger than that of the latter, and with a mixture of ay. In reckoning by abjad its value is ninety. It is used as an abbreviation for safar, the name of the second month in the Arabian calendar. Also, being the initial of the title zuba-dar, q. v., it is usually affixed by him as a cypher to zamin-dāri grants, as a mark of authentication. a.

As a proper name or epithet it is generally used ironically for a wiseacre, an ignorant fool who pretends to more sense than his neighbours; as in the following answer given by a person of this description, when consulted respecting the marks of an elephant's feet in mire, by people who had never seen such an animal: gō to bāpē Lāl-Bujhakkaṛ aur na bāpē hō; pagān chāhī bāndhkar mā! hara na kudā hō. "Surely Lāl-Bujhakkaṛ and none else can understand this; may not an antelope with a millstone tied to his feet have bounded here?" This gentleman is evidently of the same family with the Wise Men of Gotham. Some twenty or thirty years ago there was a very popular little book current in Scotland, attributed to the pen of the celebrated Adam Smith, entitled "The History of Wise Willie and Witty Eppy" Wise Willie is undoubtedly the full brother of Lāl-Bujhakkaṛ, for once upon a time the folk of Fife brought him a horserace which they had picked up, and he sagely assured them that it was the new moon, only it puzzled him sorely to account for its having fallen in Fife as he had seen it the night before it to the south west over a very remote part of the country. h.s.

عنون, the twenty-fifth letter of the Arabic alphabet, the twenty-ninth of the Persian and the thirty-second Hindustani; it is one of the dental letters, and has the sound of the English n, with the following exceptions, the letter nan has a very soft nasal sound in plural terminations, as en, en, en, and en, and in the terminations in an and en of the aorist and imperative of verbs; it has also this nasal sound in the middle of some words, as manah, the face, hamsah, to smite &c., for which no rule can be laid down; in this dictionary the nasal sound of n is always indicated by u; when en can precede be or pe it has the sound of n, as men-be a pulpit, for men-be, sampat, prosperity, for sampat, as is the case in Greek and Latin. In reckoning by abjad, the letter nan stands for 50; in divinations it expresses the conjunct aspect of the stars; finally, the letter nan with the short a (nan) prefixed to verbs renders the sense negative, as bala, he spoke, na bala, he did not speak.

و wa or wa, the corresponding letter in the Devanāgarī alphabet. In words purely Sanskrit it has the sound of our v. Again, the Sanskrit v is frequently changed into b in the modern Hindustāni and Bengālī; hence a Hindi word not found under this letter should be looked for under b.

و wa, a copulative conjunction equivalent to our "and, with, but, now;" it is used in connecting words and phrases from the Arabic and Persian. When it merely connects two words it is sounded o, shab o raz, night and day. a. p.

A DICTIONARY, ENGLISH AND HINDUSTANI.

A

A or AY, the indefinite article, is expressed in Hindustani sometimes by the numeral, "ek," one, or the indefinite pronoun, "koī," a certain one, as "ek mard," a man, or "koī mard," a man, or a certain man. A, before verbal nouns, in such phrases as a-vrat-na, a hukm, &c., is expressed by the postposition "ko," as "wuh mukh kī kō gayā," he is gone a-missing, "shukar kō gayā," he is gone a-hunting; and frequently the "ko" is omitted after the Hindustani infinitive, which last, however, remains in the inflected state, as "wuh parne dayā," he is gone a-sweeping. The meaning of a in the sense of by or per, as by the yard, per month, &c., is expressed variously; thus, five rupees a-yard, "fi gaz pānch rupae," or "sare gaz pānch rupae," or "gaz bhar pānch rupae," you shall receive a rupee a day, "tun ko roz roz ek rupiya milogā."
